RECIPROCITY AND FLAX.

An argument recently advanced by reciprocity advocate was that taking the tariff off of flax would enable North Dakota farmers to get seed flax from Canada cheaper than will henceforth be 8 o'clock. they could buy it on this side of the line, says the Grand Forks Times. The flax question has not received much attention and yet it is one of She has been spending the past two the most important items in the pro- weeks in the capital city. posed agreement. In 1908, the last statistics at hand. North Dakota produced $.376,854 bushels of flax. At $2.17, the current price today for No. 2, which is a fair average, that crop would be worth $17,177,738. In 1909 the entire flax crop of the United States was 25.850,000, so that North Dakota produced one-third of the entire output, and this country produces almost all the flax of the world certainly all that enters into consumption on this continent. We have a market one-third of which is supplied by a North Dakota

The ing the year ending June 30, 1910, [family will remain here this summer. there was imported into this country from Canada, 1,410,398 bushels of flax. Now accepting the theory of the advocates of reciprocity that the agreement will lower the cost of a food product the amount of the tariff, it is evident that it will have the same effect on other articles. This would mean lowering of the price of flax twenty-five cents a bushel, if the tariff city Saturday morning. is removed, and make a depreciation of $2.50 per acre on a ten bushel crop. or $250 on a hundred acres of flax.

But the reciprocity advocates pass the question over with the sneer that it don't amount to anything anyhow, for flax is a new land crop. Suppose it is a new land crop. It is the crop that makes the difference between prosperity and poverty to the man who has either settled on a claim or purchased land in the great regions of our own state which are just being opened. The farmer can get a flax crop the first year after the sod is tuiled and even when the plowing is done in the spring. He can not caller at the court house Friday af raise any other crop under those conditions with auccess. The flax crop is the first money producer on the new land, and it is what has given this state its great attraction for men with plenty of muscle and energy and little cash. it is what has made a home and independence possible to thousands who live in this state, and trate of this city, and refer the voters it is what will make the same things possible to thousand more.
