TRYING TO BE PATRIOTIC.

Leaders of the Nonpartisan league come out of the St Paul conference with their loyalty questioned and their influence among the farmers of the northwest badly shattered. They have preached an economic doctrine which if not openly seditious, was anything but patriotic.

Some day the bill of information against Townley and his henchmen will be drawn up by the league members themselves. There is enough evidence to convict them of poor leadership and to send their satellites, such as Frazier et al, to political oblivion.

It is not fair to the rank and file of North Dakota farmers to indict and Frazier The chief executive sat and Central America. quietly while LaFollette uttered his many leagu disapproval

The St. Paul meeting was the natural climax of a policy pursued by the leaders ever since war was declared Mr. Townley showed his colors first a means of meeting the expenses of In this Engel says: war By implication at least, he discouraged the purchase of these securities, even though he may not have come out openly. He never failed to leave the impression that he was adverse to the farmers putting their money at the disposal of the government to fight German militarism.

When the state board of investment declined to use $200,000 of school funds to purchase liberty bonds, the unsympathetic attitude of the administration to the policies of financing the loan was evident. This board is largely made up of Townley's tools.
